

CIGARETTE PAPERS

FOR AFTER-DINNER SMOKING

By CHARLES LOWE

Early Risers.

In the diary of his historic voyage in the Bacchante, our present gracious sovereign, on getting the news of the Kaiser's death, he was so glad that he was adapting a verse from the Song of Deborah: "Ye heights of Monbana, may no dew or rain light upon you nor your fields increase, for fear that the light of the morning may be dimmed by the shadow of the Kaiser." But everything has its compensations. For another shield of the Kaiser has now also just been cast away in the shape of the "shimmering coat of mail" with which the Kaiser, as All-Highest War Lord, set out to "back his way through" from the Alsace to the Seine, and had his monarchic uprisings in the Marne, so that he all but escaped the fate of Kaiser Barbarossa (Red Beard), who, in one of his crusades, fell from his horse when forming a line in the Marne, and succumbed to the weight of his armour. But with all his virtues, Kaiser "Barbarossa" was not such an early riser as Kaiser "Barbarossa" of the Kaiser's diary. The Kaiser's diary, the maxim that it is the early bird which gets the worm. The highest form of battlefield courage is said to be of the 2 o'clock in the morning kind, and the Kaiser, on July 1, the day of the tremendous German push for the Marne, the War Lord, was already awake and posting to his Boswell "Barbarossa" one Karl Reinert, who said: "Lokal Anzeiger, who thus described the scene and flashed it off to the apprehensive citizens of Berlin—

Valour of Discretion.

At 3 o'clock in the morning the Kaiser turns to a Staff officer and says: "The army shall know that I am with it in these serious hours, and that my wishes accompany it." A few minutes later, at a shaky table and in the dim light of a small pocket lamp, the Emperor signs a telegram which is immediately despatched to all the troops engaged. The telegram reads: "His Majesty the Kaiser is with the troops that he has arrived behind the front of attack and will watch the battle from a tower."

STORIES UNFOLDED IN THE DIVORCE COURT.

Wife's Story of Drugging at West-End Restaurant

An extraordinary incident, alleged to have taken place at a West-end restaurant, has been the subject of a sensational story in the columns of the Standard. It is stated that a counsel in the case of Edgell v. Edgell and Keesley. On behalf of the petitioning husband application was made for an order that the wife should be committed to the custody of the Lord Chancellor, Mr. Edw. R. Keesley. Counsel said that while the husband was away on military service he had been the victim of a conspiracy of Pensioners. He had not seen her since November, 1917. She complained of being

TWO WIVES IN ONE ROOM. Before Justice Horridge, the wife of Frank, Dick Clark obtained a decree nisi on the ground of his bigamy and adultery. She said she had a girl friend and 2 men when she had taken some champagne and was drugged. When she woke up she found her husband in bed with the man Keeley, whose name, at the time, she did not know, or, at any rate, would not state (said counsel). Believing that her husband was guilty of adultery, she shortly afterwards, however, he received from his parents intercepted letters to his wife signed, "Reddy" and "Edw. R. Clark." She said she was told that Keeley (who is in 1 of the Canadian Forces) was not in England at the time she miscondemned herself and inquired if there was any evidence against Keeley was the letters to the woman, although there was a letter from another man who signed "Edw. R. Clark." She said she thought Keeley ought to be served with the divorce papers by registered letter.

NAVAL COMMANDER'S SUIT.
Lt.-commander W. S. Davenport, R.N., asked to have his marriage with Beatrice Davenport, a divorcee, annulled on the ground that at the time of the ceremony in 1914 her husband, Lt. Col. Hardestad, was in the army and had married him in 1916. Petitioner said that he and she were engaged to respond with the consent of her parents. In consequence of the divorcee's recalcitrance, petitioner made inquiries, and discovered respondent's marriage. She admitted it, saying she had never lived with her husband, and that she had never annulled the marriage. Before he went to sea he obtained employment for respondent as a nurse, and she remained with him as soon as she was free. When war broke out witness went and saw her on shore leave, when she informed him that her husband, Lt. Hardestad, had died. Witness then thought the moment had come for him to carry out his promise to respondent, and the following day he went to the altar and gave her notice at the time that she gave her

DESERTED WIFE.
Justice Horridge was asked to grant a decree of restitution of conjugal rights to Mrs. Madeline Lewis, wife of Mr. Lewis, a married man, who had deserted her. Mrs. Lewis said she lived with her husband at Kensington Gardens-ter., and Queen's-ct., Mayfair. In Oct., 1910, he left her and has not returned. Last March she wrote him:—
—I think it is best if I either come to you or you return to me.—Always affectionately,
—He replied:—
—My dear Madeline, I have received your registered letter, and I may as well tell you the fact now, that I have no slightest intention of living with you again.—Yours sincerely, Hy. D. Lewis.
—A restitution decree was granted.

WIFE'S EXPENSIVE TASTES.—Capt. Almonel Claude King petitioned the court for a divorce on the ground of his marriage on the ground of the misconduct of his wife, Violet Mary King. King said that he had been married to his wife, Violet Mary King, in 1914. King said that he had no money. King said that he had joined up in Nov., 1914. He was married in 1910, and lived at Tipper Philadelphia. King said that he had no money. King said, his wife was extravagant and

HUSBAND AND "COMPANION." Mrs. Ann Catharine Walker asked for a divorce because of the desertion and misconduct of her husband, Mr. Saml. gradually increased. In 1912 her mother had a companion, and in 1913, at the suggestion of Mrs. Walker in the house. In the autumn of 1913 the girl went away and when, said Mrs. Walker, she spoke to her husband about his intimacy with the girl he admitted he was very fond of her and that reconciled and taken home. From then on she was treated as a normal wife and commenced to be away week-ends as well. This made the wife suspicious and when she returned one day she found her husband snuggling his relations with Miss H. She continued to live with him, as she hoped to get back to her old life. Her husband lived with her (his wife) as before. In 1916, however, he left her altogether. She obtained a divorce from him at the County Courts in February this year Mrs. Walker came to London to find out where her husband had gone and what he was doing. At Southampton-row and the next morning she saw her husband come out of an adjoining hotel—Devereux.

EF FROM ALL QUARTERS

Justice McCardie has postponed judgment in the Coventry doctors' case till the early part of next term. The hearing occupied 11 days.

Mr. Cecil Baden Ponderland, aged 18, of Liverpool, who was suffocated while attempting to climb a chimney, died of a fatal death.

First Hawk (10), of Rodgers End, was first sentenced to a period of detention in 1934 for possession of a sawed-off shotgun. It was found that he had had no training in the use of the weapon. He was a disabled officer and men in uniform or civilian clothes will be carried by rail. He was sentenced to a maximum of 2 years with a maximum charge of $25.

Her mother was said to be an Englishwoman.

GOSSIP GOING AROUND. WY

The Fifth Anniversary. The day (Sunday) which enters upon the fifth year of the war, and the events which will be signalled by special sessions throughout the Empire. The Lord and Commons will be present at St. Margaret's, Westminster, and so, the interesting question of the presence of the Sovereign. It is the church which his Majesty attends. In the case of each Chamber it will, in consequence, be carried before the legislature, and their respective processions will be a matter of course. The service to be celebrated in the light again as the Houses leave at the close.

Good News from Foch. The close of the fourth year of the war finds the outlook for the Allies brighter than has been for some time past. Gen. Foch continues to send us good news, and his message on the Marne has been a very pleasant surprise. The forces of the young Prince will in the "pocket" look like having a warm time during the next few days, while even Russia and Siberia are shaping themselves for a campaign. So we can gather courage and look forward to the fifth year of the war with every confidence.

The General Election. The Pacifists and Asquiths are now pulling the strings to postpone a General Election until next year, or even later. If their fate is decided, I am told that Mr. Lloyd George is determined to go to the country in November or possibly a little earlier. The Office people are already dispatching the necessary forms for those on which soldiers are to nominate those whom they desire to vote for them.

Party Prospects. Mr. Lloyd George will issue a manifesto, but the influence of Mr. Bonar Law will do likewise to his Unionist followers, but it will be virtually an appeal to all patriots to support the Coalition and its return to power. It is as anything political can be. The attitude of Asquith and his followers will be awaited with interest, while the split in the Labour ranks will be a very interesting feature. Henderson, MacDonald and Co. A very large percentage of the present Parliament will not seek re-election. If House badly needs new blood.

Restaurants' Revolt. Keepers of restaurants and eating houses are protesting against what they describe as the unfair competition of the National Kitchens. They have only themselves to blame for it. They have an over-stuffed menu and their extortionate charge for "come home to roost." The National Kitchens have, in all probability, come to stay, and the restaurants are more than paying their way.

Sir Joseph Jones and others. The German-born ex-Lord Mayor of Sheffield has been let off with a fine of £2,000—a mere trifle out of his pocket. Two servant girls at Wallasey were sentenced to three months in prison for leaving cigarettes in hiding for the benefit of German prisoners.

The W.A.A.C.s. understand that no more W.A.A.C.s. are to be sent to France, and that in future their work will be undertaken by the older men who are now being called up.

New Divorce Court President?

The Long Vacation has been extended, and the legal world is being surprised as to who is to succeed the late Lord Parker as Lord of Appeal in Ordinary. Though Sir F. E. Smith has declined the post, a considerable number of suggestions have been put forward, and it is probable that he will be appointed to the presidency of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, which, of course, embraces the Prize Court, in which Sir F. E. Smith has been so successful.

some event would necessarily imply some new office for Sir Saml. Evans, and just office is being indicated and just office is being indicated by the death of Lord Parker.

"Mutt" and "Jeff."

One of the latest recruits to the Military Informers is Mr. Edd Fisher, most famous of American cartoonists, whose syndicated comic characters "Mutt" and "Jeff" are so popular in the United States. He is going to illustrate the life of the American soldier in training in England and in the trenches in France.

Mr. Dillon's Fallure.

Mr. Dillon's inevitable failure as Nationalist leader has come as no surprise to those who know the man and his limitations. His suggestion that he should resign and appoint a committee to settle the Irish problem, made in all seriousness, caused much merriment. It is not surprising that names of probable successors to Dillon are already being freely mentioned.

not even with a new leader the party has been able to make much of a selection. Nationalists now realise how great was their loss when John Redmond died.

Exeter's New Dean.

The Rev. H. G. Gamble, Canon of Winchester, has been appointed Dean of Exeter, returns to the county of his first curacy of North Molton. He came to Marylebone in 1856, and successively has been at St. Andrew's, St. John's, St. John's Aldersgate, and Holy Trinity, Sloane-square. An acceptable preacher, a successful parish priest, a lecturer of distinction, and a popular writer, principally of serious subjects, he has a broad churchman, who, socially and otherwise, as Rural Dean of Chelsea, was very popular. He is just under 60.

A Duchess on the L.C.C.

One of the duties of the London County Council will be a novelty, and the public will watch with interest to see how her Grace of Marlborough shapes at Spring-gate. She is the daughter of the Duke of Devonshire, and a member of the Progressive Interest! The duchess was born a Viscountess and had a New York millionaire for a father. She married the present Duke of Marlborough in 1871.

KING'S GREAT GIFT

FOR DISABLED MEN.
£78,000 TO SET THEM UP AGAIN.

The King has made over the silver wedding gift of London, amounting to £53,000, to the voluntary fund initiated by Mr. John Hodge, Minister of Pensions, to assist disabled soldiers to re-establish themselves in civil life. In addition, his Majesty has personally subscribed £25,000 to the fund thus bringing the gift up to £78,000. This expenditure was made by the

This announcement was made by the Duke of Connaught at a meeting held at the Mansion House, when Mr. Hodge gave interesting details of his scheme. He said there had been many critics of his proposal, but they seemed to forget that it was not pro-deemed to forget that it was not proposed to set up every disabled man who was discharged from the Army. The greater proportion of the men went back to their old occupations. The men they desired particularly to cater for were the men who could not go back to their old occupations because of their disablement. This voluntary fund would help a man to become his own "boss." Up to now it had simply been a private fund opened by himself, and they had made over 2,000 men their own "bosses," owing no allegiance to any employer of labour. If the State were to do this they would be up against trouble. In the early days he was among those who imagined that the State was to do it. The State had no right, after it had taught a man to trade and equipped him with tools, to start him in business for himself. (Voices: "The State cripples you.")

In helping a man to become his own "boss" they were doing something outside the province of the State—hence the need for this voluntary fund.

No "Red Tape."

If you had a State fund, said Mr. Hodge, it would lead to a great deal of controversy. We all know how much Government Departments are harassed and hampered by regulations. The Ministry of Pensions could not administer a State fund without a set of regulations, and that would not meet exceptionally hard cases. In connection with this fund there are no regulations, and no hard-and-fast rules. We deal with a man so far as we humanly can according to his needs. There is neither sealing wax nor red tape attached to the handling of the business. As a matter of fact I hate both of them as the Devil hates holy water, and so long as I handle in this business there is going to be neither sealing wax nor red tape, but an abounding human sympathy for the men who have done so much for you and me. (Cheers.)

Cases to be Promptly Dealt With

In many cases, he continued, it would have been impossible for the State to have done what the fund had done. The committee would sit every day in order that every case might be promptly dealt with. They would have no drones on the committee—only workers. Subscriptions of £1,000 each had been received from Lord Inchiquin and the Duke of Devonshire.

escape, the P. and O. Company, Mr. Walter De Frece, and the Eccentric Club. My whole heart is in this business, said Mr. Hodge. On the recruiting platform we made promises to look after the wife and children during the time the husband and father was fighting, and if he did not come back to see after them. I am one who made that promise, and I am doing everything I humanly can to fulfill my part of the bargain. I am convinced, now that the King has become patron of this fund, and has shown his interest by his donation, that we shall be able to do even greater things.

QUESTIONS IN COMMONS ABOUT IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

(R.) asked the Prime Minister whether the Government had decided upon the adoption of a policy of Imperial Preference after the war.—Mr. Bona Law said the reply was in the affirmative.—Mr. Smith: Does it include the question of tariffs as well?—Mr. Law

Obviously preference in duties a well.—Mr. Snowden: Will the House have an opportunity of deciding upon this question?—Mr. Law: It must be quite obvious that as long as the war lasts there will be no opportunity of carrying out such a policy. All that is happening is this: The Government have put themselves in line with the Governments of the Dominions in accepting the principle.—Col. Wedgwood (R). Do these proposals involve taxation upon food?—Mr. Law: No, the resolutions, as I have said, take the form of resolutions adopted by the Dominion Governments in favour of preference in existing duties and any subsequent duties that may be imposed.

AMERICA'S WAY.
At Oyster Bay, New York, a mob of people raided the home of Mr. C. L. Pullitz during the early hours of which subsequently sold it to Mr. Pullitz, who became a naturalized citizen at the time of the sinking of the Lusitania.

Sunday, and seized an oil painting of the Kaiser, which the Emperor sometimes ago presented to Mr. Roosevelt. The crowd smashed the picture and dragged it ignominiously through the streets, after which they quietly dispersed. The picture was presented by Mr. Roosevelt to the public library.

WINDFALL FOR KIND FAMILY.
A Winnipeg cable to the "Canadian Daily Record" on Tuesday says:—

the result of showing kindness to a strange man who knocked at their door 17 years ago, when he was down and out, the family of the late Mr. John McKegg, of this city, has been notified that the person befriended by John Hewlerson, has died and left them $20,000. The family recall the

BOXING NOTES By 'COUNT OUT'

A New Jersey Dressing.

Was not the heavy-weight champion of the world decided at Harrison Torsey, when Jack Dempsey, of Salt Lake City, knocked out Fred Fulton, of Kansas City, in the corrected time of 2:37 and 1/2? Willard takes the last of all counts before the next champion can be ushered in. Probably Jess would have it so, for he has risked his title but once since he was Jack Johnson just over 3 years ago. The man who was given the chance was Freddie Moran, and the contest took place in New York.

work, resulting in a newspaper article for Willard. Moran was well outpoured in this 10-round no-decision, but as salary for his wounds he received a losing-out amounting to over £4,000. It is quite reasonable to assume that neither Dempsey nor Fulton received anything like the amount for his trouble in New Jersey, according to the preliminary notices. A large percentage of the receipts were for war charities, and this one can understand in view of the Fulton v. Willard case of recent date. Anyway, we know that Fulton and Dempsey met and that Freddie was knocked out in a round where 8oz. gloves must be used and the limit is 8-rounds with no decision. Also, New Jersey underlines the rule that there must be no hitting on the breakaway. However, the "no-decision" counts for nought if a man is felled inside the distance. It was no surprise that the champion was between Freddie Welsh and Benny Leonard, and also the Al McCoy—Mike O'Dowd battle for the middle-weight honour. Whatever the outcome may have on the titular rights of Fulton and Dempsey contest, all will agree that these men are the logical contenders for the heavy-weight throne. Fact, or form, Fulton is better than a fact, for he is a man who has double Willard all the way. For instance, there is his bout with Moran in New Orleans, when the Pittsburgh dentist was beaten in 3 rounds. Compare this with Willard's victory over Moran in New York. Many other comparisons could be drawn and all in favour of Fulton. A New York writer describes Fulton as being "built on fighting lines. From his waist down he is small and from his stomach up he is of gigantic proportions. He has the most effective left ever hung on a prizefighter, and he also carries a knockout right."

right." Born 27 years ago, weighs just over 155lb. and stands 6ft. 4in. His lumpy face has won him the cognomen of "The Shortstack." He is a native of West Virginia, and his home town is 135th St. 31b., his height being 6ft. 4in. He started boxing in 1915 when at the age of 20, but did not catch the public eye until he made his appearance in the round goes that find favour in San Francisco. In 2 of these short bouts he bested Ed Smith and Carl Morris, and since then he has been a regular attraction of him. In all his wins number 59 and about a dozen of these have been secured in 1 round. On July 4 last he knocked out Doc Devere in the first spasm, and two days later trounced the life out of him.

Mr. H. H. Lewisham scintillated here with his wit. "T. H. H. (Lewisham)—Yes; I was the first to see the light. I was the only one not so favoured by this time, Stoker's elumination."

Try to bite the teeth out of a circular saw and you will get some idea of what Fred Rhye's taste at the Ring is like today.

A couple of bluejackets, Stoker always says, will climb through the rigging of a ship at the Ring to-morrow afternoon, they are to climb through the rigging of the 20 rounds.

Stoker's Benny Williams is to have a good night at the Ring, Aug. 29. Here's your chance to do a good turn. Barney Hyams is doing his share, for he is all out to help the old-time veteran. A good night—Hyams sure.

is of gigantic proportions. He has the most effective left ever hung on a right leg, and he also carries a knockout in his right." Born 27 years ago, Fothergill weighs just over 155 lb. and stands five feet six inches tall. He has won his way to recognition in a much shorter time than Dempsey. Dempsey, Billy, returned to the opinion that Dempsey was the goods. Corbett had the scientific branch of the science. He had the call, but Dempsey is the
